Welcome to Ischys

We're Glad You're Here

Taking care of your mental health isn't about becoming a different person. It's about understanding what is happening, discovering what helps, and finding ways to help you function and feel better in your everyday life.

At Ischys Integrative Mental Wellness, we believe good psychiatric care starts by looking at the whole person—not just a diagnosis or a list of symptoms.

Medication may be an important part of your treatment, but it is rarely the entire picture.

Sleep, nutrition, movement, physical health, relationships, stress, substances, hormones, daily routines, meaningful activities, and your environment can all influence how you feel and function.

That's why we'll look at the bigger picture together.

What You Can Expect

Your care is collaborative.

That means I want to know not only what symptoms you're experiencing, but also:

What is getting in the way of the life you want to live?

What is already working?

What have you tried before?

What matters most to you?

What changes feel realistic right now?

Treatment may include psychiatric medication, education, behavioral strategies, lifestyle interventions, collaboration with your therapist or other healthcare providers, and evidence-informed integrative approaches when appropriate.

Most importantly, you have a voice in your treatment.

I will explain the reasoning behind recommendations, discuss alternatives when they exist, and help you understand the potential benefits and risks so that we can make thoughtful decisions together.

This Toolkit Belongs to You

This packet isn't homework.

Think of it as a collection of tools.

Some will be useful now. Others may become useful later. You don't need to change everything at once, and you certainly don't need to do everything perfectly.

Inside, we'll explore things such as:

Sleep • Movement • Nutrition • Hobbies • Relationships • Stress • Coping Skills • Substances •

Medication • Meaning & Purpose

You may be surprised by how much seemingly small changes can influence the way you feel.

Start Small

Mental health symptoms can make change difficult.

Depression can make getting started feel impossible.

ADHD can make knowing what to do very different from actually doing it.

Anxiety can make change feel overwhelming.

Recovery from substance use can require rebuilding routines, relationships, pleasure, and purpose.

Whatever brought you here, we'll start where you are.

You don't need to fix your whole life this week.

Sometimes the first goal is simply finding one thing that makes tomorrow a little better than today.

A Question to Take With You

If your mental health improved, what would you be able to do—or enjoy—that is difficult for you right now?

That's where we'll begin.

Welcome to Ischys Integrative Mental Wellness.

Whole-person psychiatric care. Thoughtful treatment. One step at a time.

This toolkit provides general educational information and does not replace individualized medical or mental health advice. Your treatment recommendations will be based on your individual needs, medical history, symptoms, goals, and circumstances.
