Resources & Staying Connected

By Laura Jane Hyte-Garner, MSN, APRN, PMHNP-BC

You Don't Have to Remember Everything

Mental-health treatment doesn't happen only during appointments.

Sometimes you need information.

Sometimes you need additional support.

Sometimes you simply need to remember:

"What was that resource we talked about?"

Keep this page somewhere you can find it.

Recovery & Substance-Use Support

Recovery can involve professional treatment, medication, therapy, peer support, family support, community, spirituality—or a combination.

There is no single pathway that works for everyone.

USARA

Utah Support Advocates for Recovery Awareness

Peer-based recovery support, recovery coaching, community resources, activities, and support for individuals and families.

Support for Family Members

Substance use, serious mental illness, and other behavioral-health conditions can affect the entire family.

Family members may benefit from education and support too.

Resources may include:

Al-Anon • SMART Recovery Family & Friends • NAMI Utah • Family therapy • Peer/family support programs

When You Need More Help Than a Website Can Provide

Online resources and this toolkit are educational.

They aren't substitutes for individualized assessment or treatment.

Contact your healthcare provider when symptoms are worsening, treatment isn't working as expected, you're experiencing concerning medication effects, or something has significantly changed.

Crisis Support

988 Suicide & Crisis Lifeline

Call or text 988

Available throughout the United States for people experiencing a mental-health, suicide, or substance-use crisis.

You don't have to be actively suicidal to contact 988.

Emergency

Call 911 or go to the nearest emergency department for an immediate medical or safety emergency.

Poison Help

If you believe you or someone else may have taken too much medication, the wrong medication, or another potentially poisonous substance:

Poison Help: 1-800-222-1222

For severe symptoms, unconsciousness, difficulty breathing, or another immediate emergency, call 911.

Bring Questions With You

You don't have to figure everything out yourself.

If you find something online, see something on social media, hear about a supplement, wonder about a medication, or aren't sure whether something applies to you:

Bring it to your appointment.

Good questions are welcome.

One Last Reminder

Mental wellness isn't built from one perfect decision.

It's usually built from many small things:

Treatment

Sleep

Movement

Nutrition

Connection

Purpose

Recovery

Learning

Asking for help when you need it

Keep experimenting.

Keep noticing.

Keep talking with us about what you're learning.
